

Profile of the Muhammad Idrees Ahmed, Commandant NPA

Muhammad Idrees Ahmed is an Additional Inspector General of Police (PSP) with over three decades of distinguished service. His current role as Commandant of the National Police Academy (NPA) underscores his reputation as a key architect of Pakistan's future police leadership.

His career is marked by significant operational command as Regional Police Officer (RPO) in Multan, Bahawalpur, and the sensitive Gwadar region. He is renowned for his investigative acumen, notably supervising the resolution of the high-profile Zainab murder case. His security expertise was honed as DIG VVIP Security in Lahore and during a two-year tenure in the Counter Terrorism Department (CTD). His core specialties include resolving sensitive, high-profile case, overcoming complex security threats, and instilling a proactive, leadership-oriented mindset in PSP officer trainees.

A dedicated advocate for professional development, he has served as DIG Training, Deputy Commandant of the NPA, and Commandant of the Police Training College in Chung. His experience is further enriched by UN Peacekeeping missions in Liberia and Sudan.

Combining intellectual rigor from advanced academic training with extensive practical policing, Officer Ahmed's career exemplifies an unwavering commitment to justice, strategic reform, and building a merit-based police service.
